  - Strengthening Communities
    Recognizing that interconnected solutions are needed to resolve problems in high-poverty neighborhoods, new approaches to neighborhood revitalization are being pursued through the Neighborhood Revitalization Initiative. This collaboration among the U.S. Departments of Housing and Urban Development, Education, Justice, Treasury, and Health and Human Services supports the ability of local leaders from the public and private sectors to attract the private investment needed to transform distressed neighborhoods into sustainable, mixed-income neighborhoods with the affordable housing, safe streets, and good schools every family needs. This discussion will provide you with information on several of the funding opportunities, including the Choice Neighborhoods Initiative, Promise Neighborhoods, and Strong Cities, Strong Communities.
    - Moderator: Luke Tate, Senior Policy Advisor, PD&R, HUD
    - William Gilchrist, Director of Place-Based Planning, City of New Orleans
    - Anice Schervish Chenault, Program Manager, Community Solutions Team, Strong Cities Strong Communities Initiative, HUD

♦ Accessing Private Resources Through Foundations and Private Partnerships
   Even in these tough times, there are private funds available to implement community and economic development activities. Learn about these organizations, their priorities, and their expectations for partners. Also, learn about how to attract nationally based private partners to support locally based projects near your institution.
   • Moderator: Susan Taylor Batten, President and CEO, Association of Black Foundation Executives
   • Flozell Daniels, Jr., President and CEO, Foundation for Louisiana
   • Sherrill Hampton, Director for Applied Leadership and Community Development, Johnson C. Smith University
   • Mark Quinn, Assistant Professor, Department of Business Administration and Economics, Xavier University of Louisiana

11:30 a.m.–12:15 p.m. General Session
♦ Accessing Federal Resources
   Learn about federal programs and resources that may be available to support programs that can strengthen low-wealth neighborhoods.
   • Miki Kim, Senior Advisor, Office of Community Services, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

12:15–1:30 p.m. Lunch (on your own)
1:30–2:45 p.m. General Session
♦ Investing in the Future: Colleges Working With K–12 Schools is a Community Benefit
   The quality of K–12 education, particularly in low-income communities, has become a concern to local, state, and national policymakers. During this session, you will learn how several institutions of higher education have stepped forward with innovative models to enrich the educational experience for our youngest students, and in many instances the entire community.
   • Dante De Tablan, Community Schools Coordinator, University of Maryland at Baltimore
   • Dr. Hassan Minor, Senior Vice President/Chief Strategy Officer, Howard University
   • Dr. Henry Taylor, Jr., Director, Center for Urban Studies, State University of New York at Buffalo

3–4 p.m.  General Sessions

- Anchor Institutions: Lending a Helping Hand
  - Housing Counseling and Foreclosure Prevention
    With housing foreclosures continuing to impact communities nationwide, it’s imperative that homeowners are educated about the best ways to avoid this financial forfeiture. Housing counselors can provide the guidance and advice families and individuals need to improve their housing conditions and meet the responsibilities of homeownership, as well as provide counseling services to prevent or resolve mortgage delinquency, default, and foreclosure. Participants in this session will also learn how housing counselors can lead homebuyers through the morass of mortgage scams, inflated appraisals, unreasonably high interest rates, unaffordable repayment terms, and other conditions that can result in a loss of equity, increased debt, default, and eventually foreclosure.
    - Morris Autry, Community Development Program Director, Elizabeth City State University
    - Linda Barrett, Housing Counselor, Elizabeth City State University

- Workforce Development
  In addition to the ongoing national foreclosure crisis, unemployment continues to play a significant role in our current economic uncertainty. Workforce development programs can offer communities a holistic means of combatting high unemployment rates by providing its residents access to the training and skills they need to be more competitive in this ever-evolving work environment. Learn how workforce development programs established by OUP grantees continue to successfully provide individuals with the means to develop the job skills they need to gain a competitive edge in today’s workforce.
    - Pauline Harvey, Director, University of Alaska Fairbanks, Chukchi Campus
    - Jane Winzer, Grants Manager, University of Alaska Fairbanks, Chukchi Campus
    - Janice Sneed, Vice Chancellor, Community and Workforce Development, Southern University at Shreveport

♦ Tribal Colleges and Universities: Telling Their Story

How can our nation’s Tribal Colleges and Universities embrace modernity and functionality while still ensuring that their cultural traditions are preserved for future generations? This is the question that each of our Tribal Colleges and Universities Program (TCUP) grantees have successfully answered time and again through innovative and inspirational concepts that enhance the learning environment for students who will be the leaders of tomorrow. Listen as TCUP grantees share examples of phenomenal campus facilities that have been built, renovated, expanded, and equipped using TCUP funds, leveraged resources, and a great deal of determination.

♦ Anchor Institutions: Helping Communities Help Youth

- Anti-Bullying

Bullies have been as much a part of the school experience as dodge ball and weekly mystery meat day in the cafeteria. However, as times and technology change, so, too, has bullying. No longer simply a “rite of passage” limited to verbal taunting or schoolyard scraps, bullying has become far more pervasive—and far more pernicious, due in part to popular social media networks that have effectively made bullying inescapable. Join us as we explore the myriad ways in which schools and the federal government are stepping up with anti-bullying initiatives designed to protect our nation’s children.

- Dr. Cynthia Reed, Director, Truman Pierce Institute, Auburn University

9–10 a.m. General Sessions (continued)
♦ Anchor Institutions: Helping Communities Help Youth
  • Tools Designed to Serve Youth and Communities
    Learn how programs like GreatSchools, a San Francisco-based nonprofit with whom HUD partnered in 2011, and the multi-agency FindYouthInfo.gov Initiative are working to provide parents the tools they need to make informed educational choices for their children and become even more involved in their children’s educational future.
    - Maria Queen, Public Housing Revitalization Specialist, HUD

10–10:15 a.m. Break

10:15 a.m.–12 Noon General Sessions
♦ Moving to the Future
  • HUD’s Research Roadmap
    HUD is undertaking a major effort to develop a long-range research plan that will identify top research priorities that HUD and its partners can address throughout the next 5 years. In developing this roadmap, HUD is seeking input from outside stakeholders, other federal agencies, and the broader research community. This is your opportunity to help contribute to forming the grid of HUD’s Research Roadmap.

  • OUP’s New Focus
    While OUP may not have funding to award new grants, it is important that we focus our efforts on activities that will continue to benefit institutions of higher education and the communities in which they work. This is your opportunity to share your thoughts on how OUP can be most beneficial to you as you forge ahead in these challenging times, to nurture existing partnerships and form new ones to revitalize your communities.
